Talent & Recruitment Director Grant Zallis addresses George Washington University School of Business forum on the future of management consulting

Washington, DC, February 11, 2009 – Penn, Schoen, & Berland Associates is pleased to announce that Grant Zallis, the firm's Global Director of Talent and Recruitment, will take part in a panel discussion of the future of management consulting on Friday, February 13th.

The panel, which will take place at the George Washington University's Duques Hall beginning at 1:00 PM EST, is sponsored by the F. David Fowler Career Center. Topics will include the current state of management consulting, the importance of long-term career focus versus immediate job placement, the differences between commercial and federal consulting, and insights into the world of subcontractors and boutique consultancies.

"As a five-year veteran of Penn, Schoen & Berland's research-based approach to corporate and political boutique consulting, I'm looking forward to adding a unique perspective to the discussion of the broader management consulting industry," said Zallis. "And as a graduate of the George Washington University, I'm especially pleased to be able to return to my alma mater to offer insights into the present and future prospects for PSB's approach."

Zallis will join panelists including Candice D. Mendenhall of ICF International, Steve Chan of Boston Health Associates, Andrew Johnson of CRA International, and Victor Reyes and Deborah Mochwart of KPMG. The event is particularly pitched toward graduate students in the George Washington University School of Business, though undergraduates in that discipline and other GWU students may attend. The dress code is Business Formal.
